

"I love making people feel good about themselves"

Occupation: Professional Cosmetologist

From the very beginning, Tricoci University of Beauty Culture alumnus Michael Terran got a sense that his investment in his education would be matched by Tricoci's investment in him.

Beyond its chic, state-of-the-art facilities, Michael quickly realized that Tricoci University was different from other schools he had toured. From the generous student supply kit to the personalized, one-on-one attention from professional instructors and management, he saw that Tricoci was a cut above.

"One thing that sets Tricoci University apart from other schools is that they really took the time out for me. They really wanted to prepare me for my career step by step ... and just to really focus on where I would go in life after school," said Michael.

Starting with the basics, Tricoci's professionally trained educators taught cutting-edge techniques and theory, giving Michael confidence and freedom to grow as an artistic and skilled hairstylist. The real-life experience and caring guidance he received helped him to quickly land a coveted position at the Mario Tricoci Hair Salon and Day Spa on Michigan Avenue.

"I wanted to be in this industry because I always had a love for beauty. I love making people feel good about themselves. And now I can take it to a whole new level with opportunities that I never had before—that I didn't even know I could have. Tricoci University made that happen."
